Section II: POLICY STATEMENT ON COPYRIGHT AND RE-PUBLICATION

The American Osteopathic College of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation copyrights each of the abstracts published in its online PMR journal, Journal of Osteopathic Physiatry, to protect the AOCPMR and the author against unauthorized use of the contents. The AOCPMR, in most cases, will grant, without charge or royalty, the use of portions of abstracts to other authors in other scholarly publications. The AOCPMR may also grant, without charge or royalty, the right of re-publication to other professional organizations, particularly for use in connection with continuing professional education. The AOCPMR will normally forward requests for permission for use as a courtesy to the original author for such author's information and possible comments.

The AOCPMR has always asked that authors of works appearing in its publications transfer to the AOCPMR all right, title and interest in such works, including copyright. Due to a change in copyright law, the AOCPMR must acquire each author's signature to effect the transfer of copyright. Abstracts and other written works cannot be considered for publication until an Assignment of Copyright form is signed by all authors and returned to us.

The AOCPMR assumes no responsibility for statements made in abstracts contributed to its various publications and relies on contributing authors for the truth and accuracy of the contents of their abstracts.
